KABUL - Afghan President Hamid Karzai on Friday dismissed as "a joke" a report of an international team's discovery of 400 tonnes of opium hidden by the Taliban in areas cleared by U.S.-led forces. Karzai's office issued a statement on the government's website denying the report of its discovery by an international team of opium experts from Afghanistan, the United States, Britain, Pakistan, Iran and Russia. The Taliban had claimed to have planted opium in an area of insurgent-held territory in Afghanistan's southern province of Helmand as recently as last month. The group has cited victory over the insurgency as one of the successes of last year's military campaign, but foreign experts have speculated that the move was meant to strengthen the insurgency against Karzai. "The information has not been confirmed, but it is a joke. The anti-corruption department is behind this news," a statement quoted Karzai as saying. "Taliban and others were using drugs. They were addicts themselves and using addicts as a key weapon," it added. The province has been the center of opium cultivation and trafficking for decades. It was once the world's largest producer of the drug before the United States led a surge of foreign forces into Afghanistan in 2001 and pacified the area with several offensives aimed at rooting out the Taliban and the opium trade. "This illicit trade is more of a regional problem. After ISAF (International Security Assistance Force) forces completely cleared Taliban and al-Qaida fighters in Helmand in July and August, it appeared that the Taliban had been weakened, but the drug trade was expanding," said Zabihullah Tamanna, a senior Afghan anti-narcotics official. "The insurgents planted opium in areas outside the district centers. The opium harvest was seen in areas controlled by the Taliban - and also in areas outside the district centers in the past two months." Afghanistan's opium production in the fiscal year that ended last month, fell a record 20 percent to 1,601 tonnes, according to the UN Office on Drugs and Crime, which published the data on Thursday. Production had risen last year, making Afghanistan the world's top opium producer. The British-based anti-narcotics charity Drugs-Free World (DFW), which compiled the data, said that Afghan opium cultivation and production is now at the highest levels in history, with more than 350,000 hectares planted with poppy in August.
